On 24 July 2014, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the interlocutory appeal (filed confidentially in relation to counts 1 and 2) by Mladic Defence against the Rule 98bis decision. The Appeals Chamber concluded, inter alia, that based on the totality of evidence in relation to these two counts, "the Trial Chamber did not err in finding that a reasonable trier of fact could have concluded that, taken at its highest, there was sufficient evidence to infer that Mladic possessed genocidal intent."
