1. The present report is submitted pursuant to paragraph 6 of Security Council resolution 1534 (2004), in which the Council requested the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia to provide to the Council by 31 May 2004 and every six months thereafter, assessments by its President and Prosecutor, setting out in detail the progress made towards implementation of the Completion Strategy of the Tribunal, explaining what measures have been taken to implement the Completion Strategy and what measures remain to be taken, including the transfer of cases involving intermediate and lower rank accused to competent national jurisdictions.¹
2. The report also includes a summary of the measures that the Tribunal is taking to ensure a smooth transition to the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals.

I. Introduction

3. At the close of the reporting period, 2 persons indicted by the Tribunal are at the pretrial stage, 16 persons are on trial and 17 persons are in appeal proceedings. With the arrest of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić, there are no outstanding fugitives. To date, the Tribunal has concluded proceedings against 126 of the 161 persons it indicted. The cases of two persons indicted for contempt are at the pretrial stage.
4. During the reporting period, the Tribunal conducted eight trials in its three courtrooms by having Judges and staff work on more than one case at a time. The Perišić trial was brought to a close. Two judgements on trials for contempt were rendered.
5. Appeals against six trial judgements are currently pending before the Appeals Chamber. During the reporting period, the judgement on the Hartmann appeal was rendered. The Judges of the Appeals Chamber also remained fully engaged in appeals from the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, rendering two judgements and hearing two cases.
6. The Tribunal continues to take all measures possible to expedite its trials without sacrificing due process. Over the years, the Tribunal has continually kept its procedures under review and has introduced a variety of reforms in order to improve its work. However, the pace of the Tribunal's trials and appeals has continued to be affected by staffing shortages and the loss of highly experienced staff members. Despite resolutions by the General Assembly and the Security Council on the issue, staff retention continues to be a problem. Without practical and effective staff retention measures, the Council should expect the estimates for the completion of the core work of the Tribunal to continue to have to be revised in subsequent reports.

¹ The present report should be read in conjunction with the previous 15 reports submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 1534 (2004): S/2004/420 of 24 May 2004; S/2004/897 of 23 November 2004; S/2005/343 of 25 May 2005; S/2005/781 of 14 December 2005; S/2006/353 of 31 May 2006; S/2006/898 of 16 November 2006; S/2007/283 of 16 May 2007; S/2007/663 of 12 November 2007; S/2008/326 of 14 May 2008; S/2008/729 of 24 November 2008; S/2009/252 of 18 May 2009; S/2009/589 of 13 November 2009; S/2010/270 of 1 June 2010; S/2010/588 of 19 November 2010; and S/2011/316 of 18 May 2011.

7. The Tribunal has transferred all accused of intermediate or lower rank from its trial docket in accordance with Security Council resolution 1503 (2003). The Prosecutor, with the assistance of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), continued to monitor the progress of referred proceedings still under way in the region.

8. The Outreach Programme intensified its efforts to bring the Tribunal closer to the communities in the former Yugoslavia. The Tribunal took initiatives to provide assistance and support to victims. In the area of State cooperation, the arrests of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić constitute a milestone in the work of the Tribunal. The Tribunal continued its efforts to ensure a smooth transition to the Residual Mechanism and continued to pursue a number of legacy and capacity-building projects.

II. Measures taken to implement the Completion Strategy

9. Despite the many challenges faced during the reporting period, the Trial and Appeals Chambers continued to take all measures within their power to expedite their proceedings, while still fully respecting the rights of the accused. An appreciation of the steps taken by the Chambers to guarantee that proceedings are conducted in a fair and expeditious manner can be gained through an understanding of the context of each case. Accordingly, a brief summary of the cases currently before the Tribunal, as well as the solutions adopted to meet the specific challenges raised by them, is provided below.

A. Pretrial proceedings

10. In the case of Prosecutor v. Ratko Mladić, the accused was arrested on 26 May 2011 and transferred to the seat of the Tribunal on 31 May 2011. The accused has made his initial and subsequent appearances and the pretrial work has commenced, with deadlines being set for various submissions by the parties. On 13 October 2011, the Chamber issued its decisions on the Defence's preliminary motion alleging defects in the indictment and on the Prosecution's motion to sever the indictment. Both motions were denied. Since the trial was still at an early stage of the proceedings, it is difficult to estimate when it will start. However, the preliminary assessment is that the trial will not commence before November 2012.

11. In the case of Prosecutor v. Goran Hadžić, the accused was arrested on 20 July 2011 and transferred to the seat of the Tribunal on 22 July 2011. On 25 July 2011, the accused made an initial appearance. At a subsequent appearance, on 24 August 2011, the accused pleaded not guilty. Disclosure is under way, as are other preparations for the trial. The first status conference was held on 10 November 2011. The preliminary assessment is that the trial will commence in January 2013.

B. Trial proceedings

12. In the case of Prosecutor v. Momčilo Perišić, the judgement, which was anticipated to be rendered in August, was delivered on 6 September 2011. Momčilo Perišić, the most senior officer of the General Staff of the Yugoslav Army, was found guilty of aiding and abetting murders, inhumane acts (injuring and wounding civilians and forcible transfer), attacks on civilians and persecutions committed in Sarajevo and Srebrenica. In relation to Srebrenica, he was acquitted of extermination. He was found guilty of failing to punish his subordinates for the crimes of murder, attacks on civilians and inhumane acts (injuring and wounding civilians) in Zagreb. He was sentenced to 27 years of imprisonment.

13. In the case of Prosecutor v. Jovica Stanišić and Franko Simatović, the accused were charged with four counts of crimes against humanity and one count of war crimes. The estimate of this case has been revised by four months owing to some of the uncertainties and difficulties indicated in the previous report, in particular the uncertainty of how long the Defence case will last. This case still requires careful and effective case management, considering the factors described in previous reports that affect the pace of the trial, namely the relatively new Defence team of Franko Simatović and the health of Jovica Stanišić. Since the previous report, the Chamber has granted the Defence teams 140 hours to present their cases. This means that the Defence case would conclude in May 2012 and that the judgement would be delivered in September 2012. The Stanišić Defence case commenced with an opening statement on 15 June 2011 and the hearing of the first witness on 21 June 2011. During the hearing of the first nine witnesses of the Defence, the Chamber spent more court time than expected on procedural matters, in particular owing to numerous applications for protective measures and late submissions of Rule 92 ter statements. On 22 August 2011, upon a request by the Stanišić Defence for a four-month adjournment, the Chamber granted an adjournment of four weeks. Although the legal team has been fully staffed since April 2011 (almost two years after the start of the trial), some of the team members, as well as the Presiding Judge, have also been working on the pretrial preparations for the Mladić case since June 2011. During the reporting period, the Chamber kept its regular sitting schedule of three days per week. The judgement is scheduled to be issued in November 2012.

14. The case of Prosecutor v. Jadranko Prlić et al., which involves six accused, is an exceptionally complicated trial, involving 26 counts of war crimes and crimes against humanity, related to approximately 70 sites, allegedly committed by Bosnian Croats against Bosnian Muslims in Bosnia and Herzegovina from 18 November 1991 to around April 1994. The estimated date for the delivery of the judgement remains unchanged since the last report. The Chamber is currently preparing the trial judgement in the case. However, Presiding Judge Jean-Claude Antonetti is also serving as the Presiding Judge in the Šešelj trial and Judge Antoine Kesia-Mbe Mindua sits on the bench in the Tolimir and Hadžić cases. The Chamber has suffered from a high rate of staff turnover. Since the beginning of the trial, four P-5 Senior Legal Officers have been assigned to the case in succession; the same is true of two P-4 Legal Officers and three P-3 Legal Officers. Presently, the legal support team has five P-2 Associate Legal Officers and two P-3 Legal Officers. The P-4 Legal Officer is currently acting as the P-5 for both the Prlić et al. and Šešelj trials. As a consequence, the Prlić et al. trial has no P-4 Legal Officer. The assignment of the Judges to other trials and constant staff attrition in this trial may affect the time needed for the Chamber to prepare the judgement. The estimate for the delivery of the judgement remains June 2012.

15. In the case of Prosecutor v. Vojislav Šešelj, the accused, who is defending himself, is charged with nine counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in the territory of Croatia, in large parts of Bosnia and Herzegovina and in the province of Vojvodina, Serbia, from August 1991 to September 1993. The estimated date for the delivery of the judgement remains unchanged since the last report. On 28 October 2011, the Trial Chamber filed a public redacted version of the report of the amicus curiae appointed to investigate Šešelj's allegations of intimidation of witnesses by the Prosecution. In his report, the amicus curiae found that there were insufficient grounds to instigate contempt proceedings against any identifiable person in the case. The Trial Chamber is expecting to hear the observations of both parties before ruling on Šešelj's allegations. Taking the foregoing into account, as well as the need for the Chamber to render decisions on two voluminous requests recently filed by Šešelj, the Chamber has ordered that final briefs be submitted by 5 February 2012 and that closing arguments be heard on 5 March 2012. The team of lawyers assisting the Trial Chamber on the Šešelj case is understaffed: at the beginning of the case, the team was composed of six staff members (one P-3 and five P-2); due to the significant turnover of staff working on the case, the team was composed until May 2011 of only three staff members and is currently composed of five staff members (one P-3 and four P-2). The current P-3 is expected to leave on 30 November 2011 and to be replaced only in January 2012. A P-4 Legal Officer is currently acting as the P-5 in both the Šešelj and Prlić et al. trials. This may adversely affect the work of the Trial Chamber. This case is also affected by the fact that the accused, unlike the other accused before the Tribunal, works only in Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian and refuses to use e-Court, which results in extended translation-related delays. The estimate for the delivery of the judgement remains September 2012.

16. In the case of Prosecutor v. Mićo Stanišić and Stojan Župljanin, the accused are charged with 10 counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war for crimes allegedly committed in concert with other members of a joint criminal enterprise against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Bosnia and Herzegovina between 1 April and 31 December 1992. Mićo Stanišić was Minister of Internal Affairs of Republika Srpska during that period and Stojan Župljanin was Chief of the Regional Security Services for Banja Luka. The geographical scope of the indictment in this case is vast, as a similar number of municipalities are involved in this case as are involved in the Karadžić trial. The estimate for the completion of trial has been revised by three months.

17. The Prosecution case commenced on 14 September 2009 and closed on 1 February 2011. During that time, the Trial Chamber heard 125 witnesses over a period of 238 sitting days. The evidence provided by a further 39 witnesses was admitted in written form. Presentation of evidence for the first accused, Mićo Stanišić, commenced on 11 April 2011 and closed on 20 July 2011. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from seven witnesses over 57 court days and admitted the written evidence of a further two witnesses. The case for the second accused, Stojan Župljanin, opened on 5 September 2011 and is currently expected to last approximately 50 court days; it is expected that 15 witnesses will be called to testify. To date, six witnesses have testified. As in the prosecution phase of the trial, the Chamber is sitting continuously five days a week; but, as anticipated in previous reports, the pace of the proceedings has been slowed by the concurrent scheduling of the Haradinaj et al. partial retrial, to which two of the three Judges have also been assigned. Consequently, each case is sitting for two weeks at a time and is expected to continue in this way until the court winter recess and possibly beyond.

18. On the basis of the most recent information available, the Trial Chamber currently projects that it will be possible for the presentation of evidence by the second accused to be completed by the end of January 2012 and for the closing arguments to be made in April 2012. This includes time for rebuttal and rejoinder evidence, together with the hearing of any Chamber witnesses. The anticipated date for delivery of the judgement has been extended by a period equivalent to the time lost owing to the concurrent scheduling of the Haradinaj et al. partial retrial. The judgement is now expected to be delivered in December 2012.

19. In the case of Prosecutor v. Radovan Karadžić, the accused — the former President of Republika Srpska — is charged with 11 counts of genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war in Sarajevo, Srebrenica and 20 other municipalities throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina. The estimate for the completion of the trial has been revised by one month.

20. The extensive use of Rule 92 ter as a mode of presenting the Prosecution's evidence continues to affect the speed of the trial. Although Rule 92 ter constitutes an in-court time-saving measure by which a written statement is submitted in place of viva voce testimony, the Chamber must analyse the written evidence, which in some cases is hundreds of pages long and may require more time than is already necessary for the preparation of the judgement. In addition, due to the extremely voluminous nature of the written evidence, it is also often necessary to give Karadžić significantly more time for the cross-examination of each witness than is used by the Prosecution for its examination-in-chief. During the reporting period, the Chamber has continued to take a firmer stance to ensure that time limits for cross-examination set by the Chamber are adhered to. This firmer stance has resulted in an overall reduction in the time used by Karadžić for the cross-examination of some witnesses. Furthermore, the Prosecution continues to disclose a voluminous quantity of material. At the end of May 2011, the Trial Chamber had to suspend the trial for an additional week to allow Karadžić to review a large batch of material disclosed by the Prosecution. Since then, the Chamber has issued decisions on nine further motions for disclosure violations and found violations in all instances.

21. As with teams assigned to other ongoing trials, the legal team assigned to the Karadžić Chamber is understaffed and subject to a high turnover rate. This staffing shortage will continue to effect the time required to deal with the ongoing motions and practical issues arising during the course of the trial and to conduct the necessary analysis of evidence. Since the start of the proceedings, the Trial Chamber has coped with a significant out-of-court workload, dealing with approximately 578 motions and issuing 426 written decisions. Already, more than 5,507 documents have been admitted into evidence, 123 witnesses called by the Prosecution have been heard and judicial notice of approximately 2,300 adjudicated facts has been taken. The latest estimate for the completion of the trial is July 2014.

22. In the case of Prosecutor v. Zdravko Tolimir, the accused, who is defending himself, is charged with eight counts — including charges of genocide, murder, extermination and forcible transfer — arising from events at over 20 crime sites. The estimated date for the delivery of the judgement remains unchanged since the last report.

23. In November 2010, the Chamber indicated that the Prosecution could complete its case by the summer recess of 2011. During the following months, the Chamber made efforts to attain that goal. Following the Chamber's request in early May 2011 that the Prosecution further streamline its case, the Prosecution dropped some witnesses and the goal of completing the case by the summer recess was almost achieved. However, the Prosecution required just over three weeks after the summer recess to present the evidence of all but one of its remaining witnesses. This additional time was needed in large part because the testimony of a few witnesses had lasted longer than anticipated. It should be noted, however, that the Prosecution has taken less time for its case than it had requested in October 2010. The parties will not be making oral submissions pursuant to Rule 98 bis. The Chamber ordered on 20 September 2011 that the Prosecution case would be considered closed on 27 September 2011 (except for the possible testimony of one witness and certain pending decisions) and that the first Defence witness should testify on 11 January 2012 or, if there is no opening statement, on 10 January 2012. The Defence has stated that its case will last roughly one month. As was pointed out in the last report, as in other complex cases, the Chamber will require a considerable amount of time to prepare the judgement. The estimate for the completion of the case remains the end of October 2012.

24. Notably, had Tolimir been transferred earlier to the custody of the Tribunal, he could have been tried with his co-accused in the Popović et al. trial. However, he is now being tried alone in a separate case.

25. The case of Prosecutor v. Ramush Haradinaj et al. is the first retrial at the Tribunal and involves six counts of violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Kosovo in 1998 against Serbians, Kosovo Albanians, Kosovo Albanian Roma and other civilians perceived to have collaborated with the Serbian forces or not to have supported the Kosovo Liberation Army. The previous estimate, according to which the retrial would last approximately 13 months from opening statements to the delivery of the judgement, remains unchanged since the last report. That estimate takes into account the fact that two of the Judges of the Trial Chamber, Burton Hall and Guy Delvoie, are also sitting on another trial. The retrial commenced on 18 August 2011, after the Appeals Chamber confirmed on 31 May 2011 the scope of the indictment and the evidence that the parties may seek to present. The Prosecution intends to call 56 witnesses to testify. The three accused have raised a number of procedural issues. While the Trial Chamber has admitted the evidence of a large number of witnesses in written form, which has expedited the proceedings, there are difficulties with securing the availability of Prosecution witnesses, which may cause some delay. The estimate for the delivery of the judgement, however, remains August 2012.

C. Contempt proceedings

26. The Tribunal's administration of justice continued to be disrupted by contempt allegations; however, the Tribunal is taking what measures it can to ensure that all contempt cases are concluded as quickly as possible and without disrupting the ongoing trial processes.

27. The accused in the case of Prosecutor v. Shefqet Kabashi was arrested in the Netherlands on 17 August 2011 and transferred to the Detention Unit of the Tribunal the following day. At a subsequent appearance, on 26 August 2011, Kabashi pleaded guilty to the charges against him and the Chamber, after having accepted the plea, heard sentencing submissions by the parties on 31 August 2011. The sentencing judgement was delivered on 16 September 2011. None of the parties have appealed.

28. In the case of Prosecutor v. Vojislav Šešelj (case No. IT-03-67-R77.3), the accused is charged with contempt for the Tribunal for knowingly disclosing in one of his books the identifying information of 11 protected witnesses. A date for trial was set immediately after a specially appointed Chamber denied Šešelj's application for the disqualification of two of the Judges on 19 November 2010. A pretrial conference was held on 22 February 2011, immediately after which the trial started. The amicus curiae Prosecutor's case was heard and closed on the same day. Šešelj moved for the adjournment of the start of his Defence case pending resolution by the Appeals Chamber of the financing of his defence. The Defence case was heard between 6 and 8 June 2011, closing arguments were heard on 8 June 2011 and the judgement was delivered on 31 October 2011.

29. In the case of Prosecutor v. Vojislav Šešelj (case No. IT-03-67-R77.4), the Trial Chamber is prosecuting the accused for contempt for the Tribunal for failing to comply with orders of the Trial Chamber to remove from his website books that reveal confidential information on witnesses. On 9 May 2011, the Trial Chamber issued an order in lieu of an indictment regarding three books. On 6 July 2011, the accused pleaded not guilty. On 21 October 2011, the Trial Chamber amended the order in lieu of an indictment to include the failure by Šešelj to remove a fourth book from the website. The accused made an appearance on 4 November 2011 regarding this new charge. The case is ready for trial and will be scheduled keeping in mind the other trials to which the Judges have been assigned.

30. In the case of Prosecutor v. Jelena Rasić, the accused is charged with five counts of contempt for the Tribunal for procuring false witness statements for use by the Defence during the Lukić and Lukić trial. The accused made her initial appearance on 22 September 2010 and was granted provisional release on 12 November 2010. On 2 May 2011, the Prosecution filed a list of 12 witnesses. The obligation to attend in person has been dispensed with for five of the witnesses; in these cases, written evidence will be admitted pursuant to Rule 92 bis. Four witnesses have been requested to come for cross-examination pursuant to Rule 92 ter. Three witnesses will be called to testify viva voce. The Defence has indicated that it will call four of its five witnesses to testify in person and that it will require four to five hearing days to do so. It is estimated that the trial will last two to three weeks and that the judgement will be issued shortly thereafter. The trial is scheduled to commence on 9 January 2012, by agreement of the Presiding Judges of the other trials to which the Judges assigned to this case have been assigned.

31. In the Florence Hartmann case, the appellant challenged her conviction for contempt for the Tribunal for disclosing information related to the Slobodan Milošević case in violation of orders of a Chamber. On 19 July 2011, the Appeals Chamber rejected the appeal in its entirety.

32. On 21 September 2011, the Chamber in the Tolimir trial issued an order in lieu of indictment against Dragomir Pećanac for contempt for having failed to comply with a subpoena. The accused was transferred to the seat of the Tribunal on 9 October 2011. The pretrial proceedings are still at an early stage.

D. Appeal proceedings

33. In the case of Prosecutor v. Milan Lukić and Sredoje Lukić, the projected time frame for delivery of the appeal judgement has been revised since the last reporting period by eight months. The revision is largely attributable to three factors: half the team working on the case left the Tribunal and was replaced by a new Senior Legal Officer and an Associate Legal Officer; the workload relative to appeal cases of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the Judges and staff; and the Chamber has had to deal with several motions seeking the admission of additional evidence on appeal, which has led to supplementary documents being filed in August by the parties. The appeal hearing was held on 14 and 15 September 2011. It is estimated that the judgement will be rendered in June 2012.

34. In the case of Prosecutor v. Nikola Šainović et al., the projected time frame for delivery of the appeal judgement has been revised since the last reporting period by five months. The revision is attributable to a shortage of staff.

35. All five persons convicted at trial have filed an appeal and the Prosecution has likewise appealed. The operative submissions of all appellants amount to around 4,300 pages, making this an unusually large appeal proceeding. Because of the work needed to appeal a 1,743-page trial judgement and in order to safeguard the fairness of the proceedings, a number of time extensions were granted. Although the primary phase of the appellate briefing was completed in February 2010, supplementary submissions continued to be filed as a result of three factors: the admission of additional evidence on appeal; the acceptance of amicus curiae briefs on appeal; and amendments made to the grounds of appeal. With respect to the last factor, translation of the trial judgement into Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian — originally projected for completion in April 2010 — was only finalized in September 2010. Thereafter, the Defence appellants were permitted to review the trial judgement in Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian and to seek to amend their existing grounds of appeal, which two of the Defence appellants did. By September 2011, all motions related thereto had been decided, eventually dismissing any requested amendments.

36. Serious difficulties have been encountered in relation to continuous changes in the composition of the legal support staff assigned to this appeal due to attrition and the use of short-term temporary contracts. Five of the six current team members joined in the second half of 2010 or in 2011. One team member left in June 2011 and one joined with a delay of five months. This has seriously affected the ability to make progress in the appeal. The fact that replacement staff needed time to become familiar with the specifics of the case and the working methodology of the team has contributed to the extension of the initial estimate for completion of the case. Likewise, the temporary assignment of two team members — one for more than nine months — to assist the Lukić and Lukić legal support staff has had an impact on the pace of the appeal. In addition, one experienced member of the drafting team left for maternity leave at the end of September and will not be back before March 2012. The renewed managerial focus on the larger issue of inadequate staffing in the Appeals Chamber intends to bring about a state of equilibrium in the Šainović et al. legal support team. This will be crucial if the case is to meet its deadlines for a July 2012 hearing and July 2013 delivery of the judgement.

37. In the case of Prosecutor v. Vujadin Popović et al., five of the seven persons convicted at trial have filed an appeal, and the Prosecution has also appealed.

Proceedings involving one of the two remaining persons convicted at trial were suspended for health reasons and continue to be the subject of a forensic medical evaluation. The seventh person convicted at trial waived his right to appeal. The estimate for this appeal remains the same since the last report. The Šainović et al. and Popović et al. trials were the first two of three mega-trials created by decisions of the Joinder Bench in 2006. This special panel was formed to consider combining similar indictments to reduce the overall number of separate trials and thereby expedite the work of the Tribunal. Owing to an extended briefing schedule ordered to safeguard the fairness of the proceedings in view of the massive size of the appeal, the filing of all briefs and supplemental books of authorities was completed in early May 2011. Following an additional period of about three months wherein the parties submitted more files, corrigenda and public redacted versions of their briefs as required, the operative submissions of all appellants totalled 5,520 pages. The briefing stage of the appeal process was followed by a number of confidential motions to present additional evidence to the Appeals Chamber and the first decision on such motions was issued on 20 October 2011. The legal support for this mega-appeal was provided by only two full-time legal officers until mid-September 2011, when a third legal officer was redeployed from the Trial Chamber to the support team. Under current projections, the team will not be fully staffed until January 2012, 19 months after the trial judgement was delivered and 8 months after the briefing was completed. As a result, the current projected estimate of delivery of the appeal judgement of December 2013 may require revision.

38. In the case of Prosecutor v. Vlastimir Đorđević, both the Prosecution and Đorđević filed appeals. The estimated date for the delivery of the judgement remains unchanged since the last report. The briefing was completed by the end of October 2011. The Defence is still waiting for the translation of the judgement. It is estimated that the hearing will be held early in 2013 and that the appeal judgement will be delivered in October 2013.

39. In the case of Prosecutor v. Ante Gotovina and Mladen Markač, both Ante Gotovina, who held the rank of Colonel General in the Croatian army and was the Commander of the Split Military District, and Mladen Markač, who held the position of Assistant Minister of the Interior in charge of Special Police matters, have appealed. The trial judgement in this case was delivered on 15 April 2011 and the appeal briefing concluded, on schedule, on 27 September 2011. The case is currently being prepared for the hearing, which is currently projected to be held in March 2013. The judgement is expected to be delivered in August 2013.

40. During the reporting period, the Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda delivered two judgements, in the Setako and Munyakazi cases. It also heard appeals against the judgement rendered in the Ntabakuze and Ntawukulilyayo cases. The Appeals Chamber expects to deliver two more judgements by the end of 2011, on the Bagosora and Nsengiyumva and Ntawukulilyayo cases, and to hear two further appeals against the judgement rendered in the Kanyarukiga and Hategekimana cases.

41. Despite the best efforts of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, it is currently anticipated that it will have difficulty in completing any appeals in the cases of Prlić et al., Šešelj and Tolimir by 31 December 2014, as indicated in Security Council resolution 1966 (2010) (see enclosure VIII). Furthermore, appeals in the cases of Karadžić, Mladić and Hadžić, if any, are likely to be filed after 1 July 2013 and will therefore be determined by the Residual Mechanism, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1966 (2010).

E. Access decisions

42. The bench constituted to decide requests for access to confidential information for use in national proceedings under Rule 75 (H) continued to function in an efficient manner, rendering five decisions during the reporting period.

III. Retention of staff

43. As the Tribunal nears the end of its mandate, highly qualified and essential staff continue to leave it for more secure employment elsewhere. Moreover, the Tribunal is in a downsizing phase despite being at its highest level of productivity, with only a negligible increase in its staffing levels since the biennium 2006-2007. The loss of the Tribunal's experienced staff has significantly affected proceedings and placed an onerous burden upon remaining staff. It has resulted in delays in the completion of the work of the Tribunal, which has in turn placed a heavier financial burden on the international community.

44. In June 2010, the Security Council responded to the pleas of the Tribunal for assistance by passing resolution 1931 (2010), in which it noted the importance of the Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously and called upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address that issue as the Tribunal approached the completion of its work. In December 2010, the Council passed resolution 1954 (2010), in which it reiterated the importance of the Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously and called upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address that issue as the Tribunal approached the completion of its work. In June 2011, the Council passed resolution 1993 (2011), in which it reiterated the importance of the Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously and called upon relevant United Nations bodies to intensify cooperation with the Secretariat and the Registrar and to take a flexible approach in order to find practicable solutions to address the issue.

45. Despite the adoption of those three resolutions, significant results have not been achieved and the Tribunal is still seeking support for two specific measures, set out in paragraphs 46 and 47 below, that will assist in the retention and replacement of its staff.

46. First, the Tribunal believes that it is essential for consideration to be given to a retention incentive for its long-serving and loyal staff members. This would be a limited payment to staff members with more than five years of continuous service who remain until the abolition of their posts. In 2008, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions endorsed the payment of a retention incentive (A/62/734, para. 14). The report of the Secretary-General on this issue included calculations demonstrating that the eventual cost of the retention payment would be more than offset by the savings associated with reduced turnover rates in terms of lower rotation and higher productivity and efficiency (A/62/681, para. 43). Providing staff members with a direct financial incentive to stay until the date of abolition of their posts has proved highly effective in other downsizing organizations. In the long run, the retention of experienced staff is the most efficient and cost-effective approach for the Tribunal to adopt because the cost of replacing staff who leave is greater than the cost associated with the proposed retention incentive.

47. Second, as the Tribunal reaches the end of its work, it is likely that the rate of staff attrition will accelerate if effective action is not taken. It is therefore necessary that the Tribunal have mechanisms in place to allow it to quickly and effectively replace staff in critical positions. The Tribunal has been fortunate to be able to attract a number of highly qualified interns, some of whom would make ideal candidates for P-2 posts. This is particularly true in Chambers where there is a high rate of attrition among junior staff and where considerable time is required for new staff to familiarize themselves with the work of Chambers. Unfortunately, under the current regulations, interns cannot apply for posts in the Professional category for six months after the completion of their internships. The Tribunal is therefore in need of a waiver so that it can tap into this resource and expand the pool of qualified and experienced candidates. This would have a direct, positive impact on the expeditious completion of trial and appellate activity. There would be no adverse financial consequences to waiving the six-month rule and former interns would have to apply through the regular staff selection process (Inspira). The Office of Human Resources Management has indicated that it does not have any objection to the waiver for the six-month break-in-service requirement for interns so that they can apply for posts at the Tribunal.

48. The Tribunal renews its plea for the international community to exercise foresight and assist the Tribunal with measures to retain and replace its staff. The longer this problem continues, the longer the work of the Tribunal will be extended, and the more money it will cost the international community in the long run.

IV. Referral of cases

49. Between 2005 and 2007, the Tribunal referred a total of eight cases, involving 13 accused of intermediate or lower rank, to national jurisdictions in accordance with Security Council resolutions 1503 (2003) and 1534 (2004). This significantly reduced the overall workload of the Tribunal, making it possible to bring the cases of the most senior leaders to trial as quickly as possible. The referral of these cases to national jurisdictions also served to forge the Tribunal's relationship with national judiciaries of States in the former Yugoslavia and to strengthen the capacity of those jurisdictions in the prosecution and trial of violations of international humanitarian law.

50. The decisions on the referral of cases were made by a specially appointed Referral Bench, and, in some cases, appeals were made against them. As a result, 10 accused were transferred to Bosnia and Herzegovina, 2 to Croatia and 1 to Serbia. Requests for the referral of four accused were denied owing to the level of responsibility and the gravity of the crimes charged, which required the cases to be heard before the Tribunal. Possibilities for referrals were maximized. Accordingly, no cases eligible for referral according to the seniority criteria set by the Security Council remain before the Tribunal.

51. Of the proceedings against the 13 persons transferred to national jurisdictions, 12 have been concluded. Proceedings against Vladimir Kovačević have been suspended until the outcome of a determination by the Basic Court Kraljevo in Serbia as to whether he is fit to stand trial. The Prosecution continues to monitor this case with the assistance of OSCE.

V. Outreach

52. The recent arrests of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić, the last two fugitives, have focused international and regional attention on the Tribunal and rekindled interest in the role it plays in transitional justice efforts in the region of the former Yugoslavia. The Outreach Programme has worked diligently in the region to ensure that the Tribunal's achievements are recognized and that the communities are able to take ownership of them.

53. The Programme intensified its efforts to bring the Tribunal closer to the communities in the former Yugoslavia. Field offices in Sarajevo, Belgrade, Zagreb and Priština held a number of events in local communities with young people, members of civil society and victims, and continued to cultivate contacts and provide accurate information to the local media. A more systematic approach to coordination with local civil society was achieved through monthly meetings with local non-governmental organizations in the region, which ensured a better flow of information and more joint activities.

54. A wealth of other outreach activities were conducted during the reporting period. Some 200 people from the region came to the Tribunal on study visits, where they gained an in-depth look at the work of the Tribunal. The Outreach Programme partnered with local non-governmental organizations to organize debates on the Tribunal's legacy and to bring young lawyers from the region to work as interns at the Tribunal. After organizing successful visiting programmes at 15 high schools in Kosovo, the Programme received generous support to expand its youth education project to schools in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia, as well as to continue its efforts in Kosovo. The ministries of education of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Serbia approved the holding of presentations by the Programme in high schools in those countries.

55. The Tribunal's state-of-the-art multilingual website remained one of the most valuable tools for the Outreach Programme, with 21 per cent of the visitors coming from the former Yugoslavia. June 2011 was a record-breaking month, with more than 420,000 page views registered for the Tribunal website, the highest monthly total since the website's launch in 2008. The Outreach Programme launched a new web feature on legal aid and the prosecution of crimes of sexual violence, and produced and distributed a feature-length documentary entitled "Sexual violence and triumph of justice", which was promoted at events held in the countries of the region and in The Hague. The number of Twitter and YouTube subscribers in the former Yugoslavia has risen steadily since the Programme started using these platforms in October 2010, confirming that the adoption of social media has been one of the most successful communications decisions of the Tribunal. This success is measured by the fact that the Tribunal has over 1,900 followers on Twitter, 900 of which joined during the reporting period, and that over 530,000 views were registered on YouTube, 39 per cent of which were from the region.

56. To continue reaching out to the public in the former Yugoslavia, the Outreach Programme depends on external funding. A contribution from the European Commission will ensure the continued existence of the Programme until the end of 2012, and the Government of Finland has generously supported youth education projects. The Tribunal notes the generous support and cooperation of the OSCE Mission to Serbia. However, more funds are needed for specific projects envisaged for the future. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 65/253, in which the Assembly reiterated the importance of carrying out an effective outreach programme and encouraged the Secretary-General to continue to explore measures to raise adequate voluntary funds, the Tribunal will be approaching States and other donors in the coming months for more support.

VI. Victims and witnesses

57. More than 6,900 witnesses and accompanying persons from all over the world have been called to appear before the Tribunal. Most witnesses come from diverse and remote locations within the former Yugoslavia. Without the courage of these witnesses to step forward and give evidence, there would be no trials and impunity would reign. Yet, many witnesses have experienced a range of difficulties resulting from their decision to give evidence before the Tribunal, in addition to the suffering and loss they have had to endure during the conflicts in the region. The Tribunal's resources are simply incapable of meeting their needs.

58. Victims of the conflict in the former Yugoslavia have a right to compensation under international law for the crimes committed against them. In previous reports, the Security Council was called upon to establish a trust fund for victims of crimes falling within the Tribunal's jurisdiction, considering the legal bases for such compensation, including the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power (General Assembly resolution 40/34). The Tribunal has received a wellspring of positive responses to this initiative from victims of the atrocities that were committed during the destructive dissolution of Yugoslavia during the 1990s.

59. The Tribunal has been taking initiatives to establish a system for providing assistance and support to victims and, towards this end, is partnering with the International Organization for Migration to receive guidance on suitable and feasible assistance measures and options for funding to support those measures. The Tribunal calls upon the Security Council to take whatever steps are necessary to lend its support to those initiatives, which, it stresses, will not impose any obligations upon States to provide funding, but rather contemplate voluntary contributions. The establishment of a trust fund for victims of crimes falling within the Tribunal's jurisdiction would bring the position of the Tribunal somewhat closer to the International Criminal Court, which already has a trust fund for its victims. The Tribunal cannot, through the rendering of its judgements alone, bring peace and reconciliation to the region; other remedies should complement the criminal trials if lasting peace is to be achieved and one such remedy should be adequate reparations to the victims for their suffering.

VII. Cooperation of States

60. The arrests and transfer to the Tribunal of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić, a milestone in the work of the Tribunal, is the result of years of effort by States to locate and transfer these two former fugitives to the jurisdiction of the Tribunal so that they can face the judicial process.

VIII. Residual Mechanism

61. On 21 May 2009, the Secretary-General published his report on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the options for possible locations for the archives of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the seat of the residual mechanism(s) for the Tribunals (S/2009/258). On 8 October 2009, the Secretary-General advised the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia of the endorsement by the Security Council of the recommendations contained in the report and requested the Tribunal to comply with the recommendation in paragraph 259 (m) and report, in detail, on its implementation of the tasks set out in paragraph 259 (l).

62. On 22 December 2010, the Security Council adopted resolution 1966 (2010), in which it decided to establish the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals with two branches, one for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and one for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, which will commence functioning on 1 July 2012 and 1 July 2013, respectively.

63. Below is a summary of the work that is being done to close the Tribunal and to ensure a smooth transition to the Residual Mechanism.

Transfer of functions to the Residual Mechanism

64. The Tribunal has established a Residual Mechanism Steering Committee to identify areas for action in relation to the transfer of functions from the Tribunal to the Mechanism, in coordination with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, the Archives and Records Management Section and the Informal Working Group on International Tribunals of the Security Council. A multitude of factors has been considered in planning the operations of the Residual Mechanism and the transfer of functions, including the resources and work processes required to exercise the judicial and prosecutorial functions transferred to the Mechanism, the long-term institutional interests of the Mechanism, the budgetary implications and the need to ensure the continued provision of support and assistance to the Tribunals as they complete their mandates.

Downsizing

65. Despite the extension of some posts following the approval of the revised budgetary estimates at the end of 2010, the downsizing process continues. Using a comparative review process, the expiration of dates of contracts of specific staff have been synchronized to the post abolition dates. The Tribunal endeavours to limit the number of staff departures by managing the abolition of posts in combination with natural attrition. The comparative review exercise for post reductions in 2012 and 2013 has just been completed. By conducting this exercise as early as possible, staff have been provided with the maximum contractual security that prudent financial planning permits.

Budget for the biennium 2012-2013

66. In addition to estimating its budget for the biennium 2012-2013, the Tribunal worked with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda to develop budget proposals for consideration by the Office of Legal Affairs. The budgets of both Tribunals and the Residual Mechanism were considered as a coherent whole. An important part of this process was the identification of functions to be transferred from the Tribunals to the Mechanism and an analysis of which functions could be merged. Consultation with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda was continuous throughout the process. After making final decisions on the proposals developed by the Tribunals, the Office of Legal Affairs submitted the Residual Mechanism budget proposal to the Office of the Controller on 15 June 2011.

Rules of procedure and evidence

67. In cooperation with the Office of Legal Affairs, the Tribunals completed a massive project to prepare draft rules of procedure and evidence to be adopted by the Residual Mechanism. Stage one of this project entailed the preparation of a first draft of the rules. During stage two, the Judges, Prosecutions, Registries and Associations of Defence Council of both Tribunals commented on the draft; comments were taken into consideration in the preparation of a second draft of the rules. During stage three, the Presidents of the Tribunals agreed on the draft and subsequently submitted the draft to the Office of Legal Affairs on 22 July 2011.

Premises and host State agreement

68. In its resolution 1966 (2010), the Security Council identified the seats of the branches of the Residual Mechanism as The Hague and Arusha. In order to facilitate a decision on premises suitable for the Mechanism and co-located archives, the Tribunals have been asked to provide detailed and costed options for permanent premises and to assist the Office of Legal Affairs with negotiating appropriate headquarters agreements with the host States. Meetings between the Tribunal and the Government of the Netherlands have already been held, and possible locations for the Residual Mechanism are being identified.

Information security and access regime for the records of the Tribunal and the Residual Mechanism

69. The Joint Archives Strategy Working Group met on 8 and 9 February 2011 at the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. At the meeting, representatives of both Tribunals, the Archives and Records Management Section and the Office of Legal Affairs worked together to commence the establishment of an information security and access regime for the records of the Tribunals and the Residual Mechanism. The Tribunals drafted a new Secretary-General's bulletin for these purposes and submitted it to the Office of Legal Affairs for its approval. The Joint Archives Strategy Working Group met again from 27 to 29 September 2011, at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. The participants discussed the steps that needed to be taken to transfer the archives and records management function to the Residual Mechanism, including the speedy adoption of the Secretary-General's bulletin, the finalization of retention policies for all the records of the Tribunals and the receipt of technical support.

Development of retention and record-keeping policies

70. The Archives and Records Management Unit of the Tribunal is working with the Archives and Records Management Section to produce records retention schedules for the substantive records of the three organs of the Tribunal. This work is scheduled to conclude by the end of 2011.

71. It was decided at the meeting of the Joint Archives Strategy Working Group in February 2011 to collate all record-keeping policies and procedures currently in use by the Tribunals and to identify those required by the Residual Mechanism. The Tribunal sent a provisional list of its record-keeping policies to the Archives and Records Management Section on 1 March 2011.

Preparation of digital records for migration to the Residual Mechanism

72. Upon approval from the Headquarters Committee on Contracts on 28 October 2009, the Tribunal entered into a contract with Memnon Archiving Services, which became effective on 19 November 2009, to digitize its backlog of audio-visual recordings of court proceedings. Substantial progress has been made in digitizing the recordings. The Tribunal has raised a requisition for the option to continue for an additional year under the contract, to ensure that efforts continue to be made to complete the digitization of the audio-visual materials in 2011. There is also an option for a second additional year under the existing contract. The Tribunal is also preparing a business case to address the digitization of those materials after the projected timelines under the contract with Memnon have expired.

73. The Tribunal has engaged a specialist consultant to advise it on the development and implementation of a digital preservation strategy that will ensure that the Tribunal's digital records and archives are authentic, trustworthy, meaningful, preserved, protected, accessible and usable in the future. The longer-term aim is to gather information for the development of a digital preservation strategy for the Residual Mechanism. The consultant is expected to submit his report by the end of 2011.

Preparation of hard-copy archives for transfer to the Residual Mechanism

74. The Tribunal engaged a specialist consultant to survey and assess the condition of hard-copy materials in two key collections — the Prosecutor's evidence collection and the Registry's judicial case records — and to recommend measures for the preservation and conservation of those materials. The Tribunal's archivist is reviewing the recommendations and preparing an implementation plan.

Review of agreements

75. All agreements of the Tribunal with States and other international bodies are being reviewed to determine whether they need to remain in force when the Residual Mechanism starts functioning and, where applicable, whether they need to be amended to meet the specific requirements of the Mechanism.

76. The General Services Section, together with the Procurement Section, has been planning service and supply contracts with private entities for some time in accordance with the downsizing and upcoming closure of the Tribunal. There are no plans for contracts to be extended beyond the expected closure date. The Tribunal has, where possible, approved optional extensions that give it the flexibility to continue receiving the services it requires. This includes the Tribunal's building leases and utilities contracts.

Information centres

77. Following the October 2009 mission of the Head of Chambers to the region of the former Yugoslavia, the President established the Informal Consultative Working Group on the Establishment of Information Centres in the Region of the former Yugoslavia, consisting of representatives of Governments in the region, to enable national authorities to better determine whether they consider it desirable to establish information centres on their territories and, if so, to develop a vision for such centres that would be elaborated through consultations with civil society in the region. Representatives of the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) were invited to participate in the Working Group as observers. In September 2010, the first meeting of the Working Group was held in Brdo, Slovenia, during which concrete steps were identified to bring the project to fruition. The Tribunal has since circulated for comment a draft project proposal on the establishment of the centres to Working Group members and observers and completed consultations on the proposal with non-governmental organizations in the region. In June 2011, the Government of Switzerland hosted a workshop in the region for Working Group members and observers, bringing together experts from various countries working in the field of archives and human rights to share their experience. During the workshop, the staff of the Tribunal's Outreach Programme reported to the Working Group on the feedback from non-governmental organizations. Based on the discussions at the workshop, it was determined that the most constructive way forward would be for the Tribunal to work bilaterally with each interested State to assemble a project proposal tailored to the particular needs of that State. Once such bilateral discussions have been held, a joint meeting of the Working Group will be convened to discuss the project proposal.

IX. Legacy and capacity-building

78. On 28 September 2010, the Tribunal, the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights and UNICRI officially launched the joint 18-month War Crimes Justice Project in Belgrade. The purpose of the project is to facilitate the transfer of the Tribunal's unique institutional knowledge and specialized skills to jurisdictions in the region and to ensure that those jurisdictions have access to the Tribunal's relevant materials in a useable form. The €4 million project was made possible through generous funding by the European Union. The Tribunal has implemented three components of the project, including the transcription of designated Tribunal proceedings into the local languages of the region, the translation into Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian of the Tribunal's Appeals Chamber case law research tool, and the training of legal professionals on how to access and research the Tribunal's public records. Over 60,000 pages of transcripts have been completed, approximately 200,000 words contained in the research tool have been translated and uploaded onto the Tribunal's website and 157 legal professionals from regional judiciaries have received training on searching and accessing publicly available Tribunal material.

79. The Tribunal has lent its expertise to project components administered by the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights, including the development of an international humanitarian law curriculum tailored to each jurisdiction's legal framework and the publication of a manual incorporating the most effective practices used by defence counsel before the Tribunal. During the reporting period, the Tribunal's Judges participated in a peer-to-peer meeting in Budva, Montenegro, with their colleagues from the region. Prosecutors of the Tribunal and their national counterparts in the region exchanged experiences during a peer-to-peer meeting in Skopje. On 26 October 2011, at the official closing event for the project, which was held in Sarajevo, Tribunal Judges participated in a final peer-to-peer meeting with their colleagues from throughout the region.

80. The Tribunal has been seeking ways of ensuring the transfer of its expertise to and access to its records by Albanian-speaking counterparts in the region. The Government of Switzerland has generously provided funding for the translation into Albanian of the Tribunal's manual on developed practices, which was produced by the Tribunal in cooperation with UNICRI and which provides a comprehensive description of the operating practices that have developed at the Tribunal since its inception. Translation of the manual is due to be completed by December 2011. The Tribunal is also seeking funding for the production of relevant transcripts into the Albanian language.

81. Encouraged by the fruitful outcome of the conference on assessing the legacy of the Tribunal, which explored aspects of the Tribunal's legacy, particularly in the former Yugoslavia, the Tribunal will convene a second conference on 15 and 16 November 2011 on the Tribunal's global legacy. The global legacy conference will bring together leading academics, international judges and practitioners, State representatives and members of civil society to explore the impact of the Tribunal's work on international humanitarian law and international criminal procedure, as well as the potential of its jurisprudence to shape the future of global justice and the advancement of human rights. Topics to be discussed at the conference include the impact of the Tribunal's substantive jurisprudence on the elucidation of customary international humanitarian law; the interaction of common and civil law procedures in the work of the Tribunal: efficiency and fairness in complex international trials; the impact of the Tribunal's work on the future of global justice and the advancement and enforcement of human rights; and the Tribunal's jurisprudential contribution to the clarification of the core crimes of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. It is anticipated that about 350 people will participate in the conference, including some of the most eminent scholars and practitioners in the field of international criminal and humanitarian law. The conference is being made possible through the generosity of the Governments of the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Switzerland and the Republic of Korea, as well as the Municipality of The Hague and the Open Society Justice Initiative.

X. Conclusion

82. The present report demonstrates the Tribunal's steadfast commitment to the expeditious conduct of its proceedings in full compliance with due process standards. Some estimates for the completion of proceedings have had to be revised in the light of factors beyond the Tribunal's control. As much as possible, the Tribunal has undertaken measures to minimize the impact of these factors upon its proceedings.

83. Staff attrition has had a dramatic impact on the pace of the Tribunal's proceedings. The need for measures to assist in retaining staff at this critical juncture in the Tribunal's life cannot be overstressed. Without practical and effective staff retention and recruitment measures, the situation will worsen, and the Security Council should expect to see further revised estimates in the future as a direct result of staff attrition.

84. The Tribunal has successfully brought to trial those accused of serious violations of international humanitarian law, thus sending a clear and unequivocal message that impunity for such offences will not be tolerated. The Tribunal also encourages the Security Council to support the judicial institutions in the region of the former Yugoslavia in continuing the work initiated by the Tribunal and the Council. By balancing the need to expedite its proceedings with a keen attentiveness to the rights of the accused and by helping to strengthen the capacity of the States of the former Yugoslavia to try alleged violations of international humanitarian law in their own courts, the Tribunal has fortified the rule of law in the former Yugoslavia and in the wider global community.

I. Overview

1. The Prosecutor submits the present Completion Strategy report, his sixteenth, covering developments between 17 May 2011 and 15 November 2011, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1534 (2004).

2. The arrest of the two remaining fugitives from the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia during the reporting period was a significant and long-awaited development. Ratko Mladić — a fugitive from the Tribunal for 16 years — was arrested by the Serbian authorities on 26 May 2011. Goran Hadžić — a fugitive from the Tribunal for 7 years — was arrested by the Serbian authorities on 20 July 2011. Victims of the crimes alleged against Mladić and Hadžić now have an overdue opportunity for redress. For the Tribunal, the arrests remove one of the last obstacles to successfully completing the mandate entrusted to it by the Security Council.

3. The arrests were undoubtedly a positive development for the Tribunal and international criminal justice more generally. However, questions remain about how the two fugitives successfully evaded justice for so long. The Prosecutor expects the Government of Serbia to answer those questions promptly.

4. With no more Tribunal fugitives at large, the Office of the Prosecutor has been able to focus fully on its core business of completing remaining cases and appeals. At the end of the reporting period two cases were in the pretrial phase (Mladić and Hadžić); two cases were in the prosecution evidence presentation phase (Haradinaj et al. (retrial) and Karadžić); three cases were in the defence evidence presentation phase (Stanišić and Župljanin, Stanišić and Simatović and Tolimir); in one case, the evidence presentation by the Prosecution and Defence had concluded (Šešelj); and one case was awaiting judgement at the Trial Chamber level (Prlić et al.). In addition, six cases were in appeal (Šainović et al., Lukić and Lukić, Popović et al., Dorđević, Gotovina and Perišić).

5. The progress made by the Office of the Prosecutor towards completing its trials and appeals has been achieved despite alarming rates of staff attrition and the absence of funds to staff the Mladić and Hadžić Office of the Prosecutor trial teams. The Office has devised temporary solutions to these problems by using its resources flexibly and by calling upon staff members to take on additional responsibilities. The Office remains indebted to its loyal staff members who, in order to ensure the Tribunal's success, continue to take on workloads above and beyond what should normally be expected. More sustainable solutions must be found for the longer term and creative approaches are needed to stem the tide of staff attrition.

6. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor became increasingly concerned about contemptuous and other conduct that undermines the integrity of the Tribunal's judicial processes. In particular, notwithstanding court orders and sanctions, the accused Vojislav Šešelj has repeatedly breached the confidentiality of witnesses by disclosing information identifying them and has openly expressed his determination to continue doing so. The retrial of the Haradinaj case has experienced difficulties in securing the attendance and testimony of key witnesses. Solutions are needed urgently.

7. As the Tribunal moves into the final phase of its operations, the Office of the Prosecutor is increasing its emphasis on the transition to domestic war crimes prosecutions. The Transition Team, under the Prosecutor's direction, is overseeing the Office's efforts to strengthen the capacity of national judicial institutions to handle effectively the large volume of war crimes cases that remain to be prosecuted in the region. While the Office has established effective working relationships with national prosecution offices, significant concerns remain about the implementation of national war crimes strategies, particularly in Bosnia and Herzegovina. In addition, regional inter-State cooperation must be urgently improved to overcome persistent barriers to establishing accountability for war time atrocities. The failure to arrest Radovan Stanković — who escaped from custody in Foča more than four years ago — is a worrying example of the problems that remain.

II. Completion of trials and appeals

A. Effective management of the resources of the Office of the Prosecutor

8. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to allocate its resources in a flexible and solution-oriented way to overcome difficulties that might otherwise jeopardize the completion of its mandate. As the Trial Division continues to abolish trial posts upon the completion of cases, the Appeals Division has supported several essential trial-related functions. These include digesting and communicating substantive and procedural decisions of interest to the trial teams of the Office, overseeing the selection and assignment of interns in the Office and managing meetings of legal advisers. The Appeals Division also assisted the trial teams of the Office with briefings on major legal issues, preparing final trial briefs and closing submissions and time-pressured work, such as disclosure.

9. To date, the Office of the Prosecutor has successfully met its court-related obligations in its remaining trials and appeals, notwithstanding several significant challenges. One of these challenges has been the lack of funding to staff Office trial teams for the Mladić and Hadžić cases. Until funds become available (funds have been requested for the biennium 2012-2013), the Office has called upon staff members assigned to other trials to absorb the work necessary to make progress in the pretrial preparations of the two cases. Appeals Division staff members have also been assigned to assist with preparations for the Mladić and Hadžić cases and to provide relief for the Office trial teams whose members are carrying heavy dual burdens. The Office has compiled rosters of qualified staff to ensure that it can quickly resolve its staffing shortages on the Mladić and Hadžić cases as soon as funds become available.

10. Another challenge for the Office of the Prosecutor during the reporting period was the high rates of staff attrition. The trial teams of the Office all report serious problems associated with key staff members leaving the Office in the midst of a trial. Shortages of personnel to assist with electronic disclosure searches and to perform trial and language support functions have also affected the Office's ability to respond quickly to demands from defence teams and Chambers. To counter the effects of staff attrition, remaining staff have had to take on additional burdens. This situation is not sustainable in the longer term and more durable solutions are needed.

B. Update on the progress of trials

11. The trial in this case was completed in March 2011. The Trial Chamber continues to prepare its judgement, which is not expected before June 2012.

2. Šešelj

12. This trial is now approaching its final phase. On 23 August 2011, Šešelj decided not to call a Defence case. The trial is expected to conclude in the next reporting period. On 31 October 2011, the Trial Chamber issued a scheduling order requiring the parties to file their closing briefs by 5 February 2012. Closing arguments have been set for 5 March 2012.

13. Progress in the case has been delayed pending the completion of a report by the amicus curiae appointed by the Trial Chamber to investigate Šešelj's contempt allegations against staff members of the Office of the Prosecutor. The Trial Chamber released a public redacted version of the amicus curiae's ex parte and confidential report on 28 October 2011. The amicus curiae rejected Šešelj's allegations, finding insufficient grounds to proceed against the staff members of the Office for contempt of court.

14. The issues investigated by the amicus curiae are relevant to credibility determinations concerning evidence adduced in the Šešelj trial. The Prosecution proposed to tender evidence regarding those credibility issues, but the Trial Chamber denied the requests. Instead, the Trial Chamber ordered the amicus curiae's investigation and has indicated that it will use the report to make credibility determinations in the case. The Trial Chamber is yet to rule on the procedural and evidentiary issues arising from the Report and on Šešelj's underlying contempt motion.

3. Stanišić and Župljanin

15. This trial is nearing its final phase, with the completion of evidence by Župljanin expected by the end of December 2011. After that time, the Prosecution will seek to call for a small amount of rebuttal evidence. Allowing for any further witnesses the Chamber may wish to call, the Office of the Prosecutor estimates that the trial could be concluded by April 2012, although, as explained below, it should be kept in mind that the Judges' competing obligations in other cases makes end dates more difficult to predict.

16. The trial schedule in this case has been interrupted by the simultaneous assignment of Judge Burton Hall and Judge Guy Delvoie to other cases. In particular, since August, the Stanišić and Župljanin case and the Haradinaj retrial have been alternating on a two-weeks on/two-weeks off court-sitting schedule. Further delays may arise from the assignment of Judges Hall and Delvoie to the Rašić contempt trial, which is presently scheduled to be held in January 2012. However, both Stanišić and Župljanin have called on fewer witnesses than initially anticipated, which has offset some of the delays caused by reducing court-sitting time.

4. Stanišić and Simatović

17. During the reporting period, the Defence phase of this case included the presentation of evidence by Stanišić. On 14 June 2011, the Trial Chamber convened a pre-defence conference. On 15 June 2011, the Stanišić Defence gave its opening statement and, six days later, it began its presentation of evidence. The Trial Chamber then granted a request by the Stanišić Defence for an adjournment and allowed four weeks for the conduct of additional preparations. This delay was offset by the Stanišić Defence withdrawing several witnesses. The Simatović Defence is scheduled to commence immediately after the conclusion of the Stanišić Defence.

5. Tolimir

18. The Prosecution has completed the presentation of its evidence in this case, with the exception of one witness, who is presently facing contempt proceedings before the Tribunal. The Defence case is scheduled to begin with an opening statement on 10 January 2012 and is expected to finish by around March 2012. The Trial Chamber granted the accused three months to prepare his defence, taking into account the fact that he is representing himself and the large volume of material he must review. The Trial Chamber considered the Prosecution's case to be closed as at 27 September 2011, subject to pending evidentiary motions, the last of which was decided on 1 November 2011.

19. The trial team of the Office of the Prosecutor is making efficient use of the court break by preparing for the Defence case and advancing work on the Prosecution's closing brief. In addition, members of this trial team are simultaneously working on pretrial matters in the Mladić case and assisting with office-wide staff rostering processes.

20. The trial in this case commenced during the reporting period and the Prosecution is presenting its evidence. The Prosecution anticipates closing its case early in 2012. The trial has been proceeding on a limited court-sitting schedule to accommodate the competing obligations of Judges Delvoie and Hall in the Stanišić and Župljanin case (see para. 16 above).

21. Some delays have resulted from difficulties with securing the attendance of a key witness to testify before the court. This difficulty follows the pattern of witness-related issues from the first Haradinaj et al. trial, and must be overcome if the retrial is to be an effective process.

7. Karadžić

22. The Prosecution is approaching the final component of its evidence presentation in this case. The current component, which deals with crimes committed in municipalities throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina, will be completed in November. The final component, which deals with the crimes committed in Srebrenica in July 1995, will start towards the end of November. As at the beginning of October, the Prosecution had used around 185 hours of the 300 hours allocated to it for its evidence presentation.

23. During the reporting period the pace of the trial increased and the Prosecution expects that it will close its case by around May 2012. The trial team of the Office of the Prosecutor has facilitated the faster pace of the trial by constantly monitoring incoming evidence and by either removing from its witness list the names of people who would have given similar evidence or reducing the time devoted to the direct examination of witnesses and the number of exhibits to be tendered.

24. The trial team of the Office of the Prosecutor has worked hard to avoid significant delays by allocating all available resources to the management of its ongoing disclosure obligations. When discrete disclosure issues have emerged, the team has promptly put in place systems to correct the problem and prevent its recurrence. The trial team has also shown flexibility by adjusting witness schedules to overcome unexpected witness availability issues and scheduling problems associated with delayed disclosure protections.

8. Mladić

25. This case is in the pretrial phase. Mladić made his first appearance on 3 June 2011. On 4 July 2011, a plea of not guilty to the charges against him was entered on his behalf. Since then, the Pretrial Chamber has convened a series of status conferences and Rule 65 ter meetings. At the most recent status conference, held on 10 November 2011, the Trial Chamber confirmed that preparations for the trial were on track. The Trial Chamber and the Prosecution were also provided with a report on Mladić's medical condition. The Chamber indicated that it was considering obtaining a further, more comprehensive, medical report.

26. The Prosecution remains committed to presenting an expeditious case against Mladić that reflects the scope and gravity of his crimes. On 16 August 2011, the Prosecution filed an application seeking severance of the Second Amended Indictment into two separate indictments, with charges arising from the Srebrenica massacres of 1995 being heard first. On 13 October 2011, the Trial Chamber denied the Prosecution's application. The Prosecution is now reviewing the operative indictment and considering ways to reduce the size of its case, while at the same time preserving the overall interests of justice.

27. The Prosecution is also engaged in other pretrial preparations, including disclosure of material to the accused. The Prosecution is allocating all available resources for disclosure reviews and, within existing budgetary limits, hiring temporary staff to work exclusively on them. The Prosecution is working diligently to ensure that it complies with the deadlines set by the Trial Chamber for December 2011 and January 2012.

28. Although there is presently no regular budget funding to staff the Mladić trial team, the Prosecutor has called upon staff members working on other trials and appeals to assist with the Mladić case to advance pretrial preparations. Rosters of qualified staff are being drawn up so that the required staff can be hired as soon as regular budget funds become available.

9. Hadžić

29. This case is in the pretrial phase and is expected to commence towards the end of 2011. Hadžić made his first appearance on 25 July 2011. At a subsequent appearance, on 24 August 2011, he pleaded not guilty to the charges against him.

30. The first Rule 65 ter meeting for the case was held on 4 November 2011 and the first status conference was held on 10 November 2011. The Prosecution is moving ahead with disclosure searches and reviews, as well as other pretrial preparations. As with the Mladić case, this work is presently being handled by staff members with full-time commitments to other cases. This emergency situation will be remedied once funds become available to properly staff the trial team of the Office of the Prosecutor.

C. Update on the progress of appeals

31. During the reporting period, there was limited appellate activity on Tribunal cases, allowing Appeals Division staff to support other work being done throughout the Office, as described above.

32. No Appeals Chamber judgements were issued. One appeals hearing was held — in the Lukić and Lukić case — on 14 and 15 September 2011.

33. The Šainović et al. and Popović et al. cases are fully briefed and awaiting hearing. The Šainović et al. briefing finished on 1 September 2010 and the Popović et al. briefing finished on 2 May 2011. Appeals hearings are projected for February 2012 and February 2013 respectively. These appeals cases are two of the three remaining cases involving multiple accused persons to reach the appeals stage.

34. Briefings on the Dorđević case (trial judgement rendered on 23 February 2011) and Gotovina et al. case (trial judgement rendered on 15 April 2011) were completed during the period. The appeals briefing in the Perišić case (trial judgement rendered on 6 September 2011) has started and should be completed in the first half of the next reporting period.

35. At the end of the reporting period, the Appeals Division was expected to carry out an inventory of at least five Prosecution appeals and 15 individual accused appeals.

1. Rašić

36. This contempt case continued in the pretrial phase during the reporting period. The trial is set to commence on 9 January 2012.

37. Since the Prosecutor's last Completion Strategy report (S/2011/316, annex II), the Defence has filed its pretrial brief and the Prosecution has filed its witness and exhibit lists, along with motions seeking to admit evidence in written form pursuant to Rules 92 bis and 92 ter. The Pretrial Chamber has ruled on preliminary motions and admitted into evidence a set of agreed facts and exhibits. A status conference was held on 9 June 2011.

38. Throughout the pretrial phase, the Prosecution worked diligently with the Defence to reach agreements on exhibits and facts so that the trial could focus on areas of genuine dispute. Through those efforts, the Prosecution was able to significantly shorten its initial witness and exhibit lists and therefore the length of the trial.

39. The Šešelj case continues to be characterized by Šešelj's ongoing contempt of court, which jeopardizes protective measures for witnesses, consumes Office of the Prosecutor and other Tribunal resources and undermines the integrity of the Tribunal's processes. Šešelj has repeatedly posted protected witness information on his website and refuses to remove it despite court orders. Šešelj has repeatedly made public statements that he intends to continue interfering with the administration of justice. During his closing statement at his second contempt trial on 8 June 2011, he declared his intention to have at least 10 contempt proceedings instituted against him. He repeated this declaration during a court hearing on 23 August 2011.

40. Šešelj's second contempt trial — concerning breaches of protective measures — was completed in June 2011. On 31 October 2011, he was convicted for contempt and sentenced to 18 months of imprisonment, to be served concurrently with other prison sentences already imposed for contempt.

41. On 4 November 2011, Šešelj made his initial appearance concerning a third contempt matter being prosecuted by Trial Chamber II pursuant to an order in lieu of an indictment. Šešelj pleaded not guilty.

42. During the reporting period, the Prosecution was once again required to devote substantial resources to issues arising in connection with the amicus curiae's investigation into Šešelj's contempt allegations against the Office of the Prosecutor. As noted above (see para. 13), after almost one year of investigation, the amicus curiae's report was filed and no basis was found for contempt proceedings against staff members of the Office.

E. Access orders

43. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to allocate substantial resources to dealing with ongoing obligations arising from access orders. As at 10 November 2011, at least 30 orders had been given granting accused persons continuing access to confidential materials on other ongoing trials. These access orders require the Office to continuously review the trial records as the cases progress, consult with any relevant Rule 70 providers and notify the Registry of materials to be provided or withheld from the accused person who has been granted access. The Karadžić trial team alone is responsible for continuing compliance work in respect of orders granting seven other accused persons access to confidential materials in the Karadžić case, giving rise to a substantial amount of review work. In the absence of budgeted funds for access work, the Office's compliance with access orders is being absorbed within existing resources.

III. State cooperation with the Office of the Prosecutor and cooperation between States in the former Yugoslavia

44. To fulfil its mandate, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to rely on the full cooperation of States, as set out in article 29 of the Statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. In addition, the Office kept abreast of developments concerning cooperation between States of the former Yugoslavia, that affect the capacity of national systems to take over responsibility for war crimes cases from the Tribunal.

45. To promote and assess cooperation during the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor maintained a direct dialogue with Government and judicial authorities from Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina, including officials in national prosecution offices. The Prosecutor travelled to Belgrade on 12 and 13 September 2011 and on 8 and 9 November 2011 and to Sarajevo between 31 October 2011 and 2 November 2011, to meet with officials and to discuss cooperation.

A. Cooperation between the States of the former Yugoslavia and the Office of the Prosecutor

46. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor sought cooperation from States of the former Yugoslavia, in particular Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina.

1. Cooperation between Serbia and the Office of the Prosecutor

Arrests of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić

47. The Serbian authorities arrested Ratko Mladić on 26 May 2011 and Goran Hadžić on 20 July 2011; both were expeditiously transferred to The Hague. For the Tribunal — and for international justice — these arrests are milestones to remember. Serbia has fulfilled a key obligation towards the Tribunal and successfully concluded an important chapter in its cooperation with the Tribunal. With no more fugitives from the Tribunal remaining, cooperation between the Office of the Prosecutor and Serbia has entered a new phase.

48. The Prosecutor acknowledges the important work done by the Serbian authorities in bringing about the arrests, particularly by the President, the National Security Council, the action team established to track the fugitives and the security service operatives who carried out the arrest operation. The Office of the Prosecutor trusts that Serbia will maintain this new positive momentum in its dealings with the Tribunal.

49. By carrying out the arrests, Serbia provided evidence of a genuine commitment to cooperating with the Tribunal. It is important for Serbia to now determine how Mladić and Hadžić evaded justice for so long and to ensure that individuals who assisted in harbouring the fugitives are held to account. During the Prosecutor's visit to Belgrade in November 2011, the Serbian authorities provided very limited information concerning these questions. The Prosecutor expects Serbia to increase its efforts to resolve this matter.

Assistance with trials and appeals

50. Serbia's cooperation with the Office of the Prosecutor remains essential for efficiently completing ongoing trials and appeals.

51. During the reporting period, Serbia maintained the satisfactory level of assistance noted in recent Completion Strategy reports. Its National Council for Cooperation with the Tribunal has played a key role in facilitating this positive outcome. The Council has promoted coordination among different Government bodies handling Office of the Prosecutor requests, thereby accelerating response times and accommodating urgent requests made in relation to ongoing trials.

52. Serbia has given timely and adequate responses to Office of the Prosecutor requests for access to documents and archives, with no responses presently overdue. Similarly, Serbia has promptly and professionally facilitated the Office's access to witnesses and the attendance of witnesses before the Tribunal. Service of summonses was timely, court orders were executed and transfers were organized as required, including for individuals in custody for domestic court proceedings.

53. The Office of the Prosecutor expects that the Serbian authorities will continue to react promptly and professionally to requests for assistance in the months to come. The Office is facing compressed and challenging trial schedules that will demand Serbia's continued positive cooperation.

Kovačević Rule 11 bis case

54. The Kovačević case, which was transferred from the Tribunal to Serbia pursuant to Rule 11 bis, remains suspended due to the poor health of the accused. It is unclear when, or if, he will be fit to stand trial. A civil procedure is under way to determine whether the accused should be institutionalized because of the possible danger he represents to himself and others. The Office of the Prosecutor has requested that the Serbian authorities closely monitor the proceedings and provide it with regular updates.

2. Cooperation between Croatia and the Office of the Prosecutor

55. Since many of the Tribunal's cases involving Croatian accused persons have been completed, the Office of the Prosecutor has made fewer requests for assistance from Croatia. To the limited extent that requests have been made, Croatia has given timely and adequate responses and provided access to witnesses and evidence as required.

56. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor has not received further information from the inter-agency Task Force established to locate or account for the missing military documents concerning Operation Storm. The documents had initially been requested for the trial proceedings in the Gotovina et al. case. These trial proceedings have now been completed and the case is in the appeal phase. As mentioned in the last Completion Strategy report of the Prosecutor, the Government of Croatia informed the Prosecutor that it had resolved to continue its administrative investigation into the missing documents so as to finalize the matter for its own records (see S/2011/316, para. 58).

57. In an address to the Security Council on 6 June 2011, the Prosecutor expressed regret about the fact that, in the aftermath of the Gotovina et al. judgement, the highest State officials had failed to comment objectively on the outcome of the trial. During the reporting period, senior Croatian officials continued to make public statements that undermine the Tribunal's work and impede reconciliation.

3. Cooperation between Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Office of the Prosecutor

Assistance with trials and appeals

58. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor depended on Bosnia and Herzegovina to continue to provide assistance with ongoing trials and appeals. The authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, at both the State and entity levels, responded promptly and adequately to the Office's requests for documents and access to Government archives. The authorities also continued to assist by facilitating the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal.

59. The authorities satisfactorily handled a number of the Office's urgent requests and assisted with witness protection matters. As trials and appeals progress, the Office will continue to rely on similar assistance from Bosnia and Herzegovina in the future.

Stanković Rule 11 bis case

60. Radovan Stanković, a Rule 11 bis transferee, escaped from prison in Foča in May 2007. He was serving a 20-year prison sentence imposed by the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Notwithstanding the Prosecutor's repeated requests, Bosnia and Herzegovina has not taken satisfactory measures to apprehend Stanković. The Prosecutor urges Bosnia and Herzegovina to urgently devote more resources to the investigation, to step up search efforts and to cooperate more effectively with other States in the region to ensure that Stanković serves the sentence imposed for his crimes.

Difficulties with implementing the national war crimes strategy

61. Slow progress has been made in prosecuting war crimes cases in Bosnia and Herzegovina. A large backlog of cases remains to be prosecuted and the implementation of the National War Crimes Strategy is facing considerable delays. In addition, a number of investigation files transferred by the Office of the Prosecutor to Bosnia and Herzegovina have not yet been completed. The Office encourages the State Court's Special Department for War Crimes to expedite the completion of investigations and prosecutions based on investigation files transferred by the Office. The same applies to finalizing investigations in respect of material transferred by the Office in connection with charges documented in Office cases but that did not form part of the Tribunal's indictments.

62. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, the process of transferring war crimes cases between State and entity-level judicial institutions requires improvement if war crimes cases are to be prosecuted effectively. The Prosecutor is concerned by the frequent political attacks carried out on the judiciary in Bosnia and Herzegovina with the aim of undermining the National War Crimes Strategy. Political leaders from all sides in Bosnia and Herzegovina must commit to war crimes prosecutions and provide all the necessary resources and support to ensure successful outcomes.

B. Cooperation between States of the former Yugoslavia in war crimes investigations and prosecutions

63. Impunity for crimes committed during the conflict cannot be properly addressed without improved cooperation between States in the former Yugoslavia.

So far, these States have failed to fully resolve long-standing inefficiencies and to overcome persistent hurdles to achieving more successful outcomes in domestic prosecutions. While the Office of the Prosecutor continued to enjoy excellent working relationships with the State Prosecutors' Offices in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia, as well as the War Crimes Prosecutor's Office in Serbia, the Prosecutor remains concerned about the level of effective inter-State cooperation in the region.

Legislative developments to improve regional cooperation

64. During the reporting period, there were some improvements in war crimes information and evidence sharing between prosecutors in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia. The Office of the Prosecutor welcomes progress in the implementation of the bilateral agreement on cooperation in prosecution of war crimes concluded between the War Crimes Prosecutor's Office in Serbia and the Public Prosecutor's Office in Croatia. The agreement has produced tangible improvements in a number of cases. The Prosecution Offices of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Serbia have also indicated their willingness to sign an agreement on cooperation in war crimes cases to facilitate the exchange of evidence and information. The Office of the Prosecutor encourages both prosecution services to finalize their negotiations and to execute the agreement as a matter of priority. The Office also welcomes the extradition agreement signed by Serbia and Montenegro addressing, among other things, war crimes cases.

Barriers to improved regional cooperation

65. Judicial institutions in the former Yugoslavia still face crippling challenges in coordinating their activities. Legal barriers to the extradition of suspects and the transfer of evidence across State borders continue to obstruct effective investigations. In addition, the problem of parallel investigations by prosecutors from different States has not been resolved.

66. The Prosecutor notes with concern the decision by the Parliament of Croatia to adopt a law declaring some legal acts of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, the former Yugoslav National Army and the Republic of Serbia null and void. The law serves to annul indictments alleging war crimes against citizens of Croatia. These developments imperil reconciliation in the region and the progress achieved to date.

67. Improved cooperation is also needed to address the problem of war crimes fugitives travelling between countries in the region of the former Yugoslavia to evade capture. For example, there is little coordinated action between the Governments of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Montenegro and Serbia to apprehend Radovan Stanković, who escaped from custody in Foča more than four years ago.

68. While regional prosecutors express a commitment to improving inter-State cooperation, urgent action is needed at the political and operational level to generate fundamental change.

C. Cooperation between other States and organizations and the Office of the Prosecutor

69. Support from States outside the former Yugoslavia, as well as from international organizations, remains integral to the successful completion of Tribunal cases. Assistance is needed to access documents, information and witnesses, as well as in matters related to witness protection (including relocation). The Office of the Prosecutor acknowledges the support it received during the reporting period from the European Union, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Council of Europe and non-governmental organizations, including those active in the former Yugoslavia.

70. The international community has an important role to play in providing incentives for States in the region of the former Yugoslavia to cooperate with the Tribunal. The arrests of Mladić and Hadžić underscored the potential of conditionality policies — for example of linking European Union membership to full cooperation with the Tribunal — to promote positive outcomes for international justice.

IV. Support by the Office of the Prosecutor for domestic war crimes prosecutions

71. As the Office of the Prosecutor moves further into its final phase of work, it is intensifying efforts to help States in the former Yugoslavia to successfully handle the many remaining war crimes cases. The Office's Transition Team, which operates under the Prosecutor's direction, is guiding efforts to provide information and expertise to facilitate the prosecution of domestic war crimes cases.

A. Access to information in Office of the Prosecutor databases and Tribunal case records

72. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to provide information to assist national jurisdictions in prosecuting crimes arising from the conflict in the former Yugoslavia, although the volume of requests received decreased from the previous period. Between 17 May 2011 and 12 October 2011, the Office received 89 new requests for assistance (compared with 123 in the previous reporting period), of which 51 were submitted by national judicial authorities in the former Yugoslavia: 31 from Bosnia and Herzegovina, 10 from Croatia and 10 from Serbia. Some of the requests were extensive and hundreds of pages of material were disclosed in response. Liaison prosecutors (see para. 76 below) from the region working with the Office of the Prosecutor played a key role in facilitating responses to those requests.

73. In addition, the Office of the Prosecutor received 38 requests for assistance from prosecution offices and law enforcement agencies in other States relating to war crimes cases arising from the conflict in the former Yugoslavia.

74. Judicial authorities in the former Yugoslavia continued to utilize procedures established under the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence to access protected evidence used in Tribunal cases, where appropriate. In that regard, the Office of the Prosecutor responded to two Rule 75 (H) applications from judicial authorities in the region, as well as five Rule 75 bis applications.

B. Expertise transfers

75. To strengthen the capacity of national criminal justice systems in the former Yugoslavia to deal with war crimes cases, the Office of the Prosecutor has established effective partnerships with prosecutors and courts in the region to facilitate the transfer of expertise.

76. The liaison prosecutors project — whereby three liaison prosecutors from the region (one from Bosnia and Herzegovina, one from Croatia and one from Serbia) work with the Office of the Prosecutor in The Hague — remains a central component of the Office's strategy to transfer expertise. In August 2011, the second year of this initiative (a joint project of the European Union and the Tribunal) concluded successfully and the European Commission allocated funding for a third year. The liaison prosecutors have access to designated Office databases, and have received instruction on the search methodologies used within the Office. They can consult with in-house experts on relevant issues. They serve as contact points for other regional prosecutors, and at the same time, facilitate requests for assistance generated by the Office's trial teams.

77. The joint project also invests in educating and training young legal professionals from the former Yugoslavia who have a special interest in war crimes cases. Starting in September 2011, a new group of nine young legal professionals from Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia, as well as Kosovo, have assisted with the Office's casework. During their time in The Hague, they are invited to attend lectures and presentations on topics related to the work of the Office and the Tribunal more generally.

78. The Office of the Prosecutor highly commends the contributions of legal professionals from the region who have worked in The Hague as part of the project. The participants have displayed a high level of professionalism and dedication, as well as the capacity to learn rapidly and make the most of the opportunities provided to them within the Office. Their performance confirms the value of the project in building the future capacity of the countries in the former Yugoslavia to effectively deal with complex war crimes cases.

79. The Office of the Prosecutor also supports other training programmes for prosecutors of the region by making available staff members with relevant knowledge and expertise. During the reporting period, Office representatives participated in nine regional conferences, sharing information, expertise, best practices and insight into the Tribunal's legacy.

V. Downsizing and preparing for the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals

A. Downsizing the Office of the Prosecutor upon completion of trial activities

80. The Office of the Prosecutor continues to downsize as its trial activities reach completion. During the reporting period, the Office abolished 18 posts in the Professional category and eight posts in the General Service category, posts primarily associated with the trial team working on the Prlić et al. case.

81. The Office of the Prosecutor supports measures to assist staff in making the transition from their work at the Tribunal to the next step in their careers. This transition may be complex to navigate for staff members, especially those who have given many years of dedicated service to the Tribunal. These staff members have become highly specialized in international criminal investigations and prosecutions, but are faced with relatively few stable opportunities to continue working in this field. The Office strongly supports current Tribunal initiatives aimed at helping staff members to make progress in their careers. These initiatives include hiring a consultant to provide individualized career coaching for staff members and providing staff with training opportunities that will expand their expertise and prepare them for roles in other parts of the United Nations system or elsewhere. The Office hopes to see a continuation of such measures in future reporting periods.

B. Preparations for the Residual Mechanism

82. During the reporting period, the Office of the Prosecutor worked collaboratively with Registry officials at the Tribunal to prepare for the commencement of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, which will take over the Tribunal's work. The Office was represented on the Tribunal's Residual Mechanism Steering Committee and was actively involved in preparing the first Residual Mechanism budget submission. The Office contributed to the draft rules of procedure and evidence for the Residual Mechanism and is working with the Tribunal's archivist to design a coherent preservation strategy for Office records. The Office has also maintained its cooperative dialogue with colleagues in the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda to ensure an effective approach to Residual Mechanism matters. In the coming period, the Office will intensify its focus on Residual Mechanism matters with a view to ensuring the smooth transformation of the Office into its counterpart within the Residual Mechanism.

VI. Conclusion

83. The reporting period was characterized by the long-awaited arrests of the Tribunal's last two fugitives (Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić), which has enabled the Office of the Prosecutor to move into the final phase of completing its mandate. The Office has managed staffing shortages arising from staff attrition and the current absence of funding for the Mladić and Hadžić cases by continuing to use its existing resources flexibly. In addition, it has depended on the willingness of its staff to take on extra burdens to meet court deadlines.

84. As the Tribunal's work approaches completion, the Office of the Prosecutor is intensifying efforts to support its regional counterparts in taking over responsibility for prosecuting war crimes cases. The Office continues to maintain positive working relationships with national prosecution offices and the joint project of the Tribunal and the European Union (see paras. 76-78) is an encouraging example of a mutually beneficial working arrangement between the Tribunal and the States of the region. In the coming reporting periods, the Office will continue to facilitate the transfer of information and expertise to prosecutors of the region. However, the Prosecutor remains concerned about persistent impediments to the effective implementation of national war crimes strategies in the region of the former Yugoslavia, particularly in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Greater regional cooperation in war crimes matters is needed to overcome these impediments. The fact that Radovan Stanković remains at large more than four years after he escaped from prison in Foča is symptomatic of the prevailing regional coordination problems and requires an urgent solution.

85. As trials are completed, the Office of the Prosecutor is moving ahead with its downsizing plan. This process will accelerate in the next reporting period. At the same time, the Office is increasingly focusing on transferring its capacity to the Office of the Prosecutor of the Residual Mechanism (branch of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia) by anticipating its future needs and taking preparatory action.

Enclosure I

1. Persons convicted or acquitted between 15 May 2011 and 15 November 2011 (1)
Name	Former Title	Initial Appearance	Judgement
Momčilo Perišić	Chief of the General Staff, Yugoslav Army	9 March 2005	6 September 2011 Sentenced to 27 years of imprisonment
