How to get there?

Travelling by air

Participants who fly to The Netherlands will likely arrive at Amsterdam Airport Schiphol.

Arrival at Amsterdam Airport Schiphol and Travel to The Hague by Train

The quickest and easiest way to travel between Amsterdam Airport Schiphol and The Hague is by train. From Schiphol, direct trains run to both of The Hague's main train stations: The Hague Central Station (Den Haag CS) and The Hague Hollands Spoor (Den Haag HS). The train journey lasts approximately 40 minutes. Trains run regularly about 5 times per hour, except on weekdays from 1.00 a.m. until about 5.00 a.m. when trains do not run. The railway system's journey planner (available online at www.ns.nl) provides the schedule for trains between Schiphol and The Hague, including the latest travel information and details of temporary timetable changes.

The Schiphol Railway Station

Schiphol Station is located directly below the airport. Participants can pick up free baggage trolleys in the baggage claim area. Participants can walk straight to the departure or arrival hall via Schiphol Plaza.

Train Tickets

Train tickets for domestic travel are available from the yellow ticket machines near the platforms at Schiphol Plaza. Tickets are also available at the ticket offices, which are near the red and white-checked cube at Schiphol Plaza. Staff at the ticket offices can provide train departure information. Large screens show this information as well.

Participants can also purchase train tickets in advance, either by buying tickets from a ticket machine or by asking for undated tickets at a service desk of Nederlandse Spoorwegen (NS), the Dutch railway. It is possible to do so for both the outward and the return journey. On the day of travel, stamp the ticket at a machine on one of the platforms.
